Reserve Not Met

The Second Chance Offer can be used for Reserve Auctions that did not meet the reserve price in some eBay Motors categories. It is available for listings within:

- Passenger Vehicles
- Motorcycles
- Other Vehicles

This feature allows the seller to extend an offer for the item to any one of the bidders with a Buy It Now price equal to or less than the original auction's reserve price.

Qualified Buyers:

A seller may extend a Second Chance Offer to all users who placed bids on a vehicle listing that closed without meeting the reserve price. It can be used immediately after the listing ends for up to 60 days. However, the Second Chance Offer can only be sent to one bidder at a time. In addition, the Second Chance Offer is not available to buyers who have opted not to receive them in their email preferences.

Price Restrictions:

For Second Chance Offers on Reserve Not Met auctions, the price must be set at or below the original reserve price. The seller will have the option of lowering the price prior to the acceptance of the offer.

Note:

Creating a Second Chance Offer is free. Sellers pay only the Final Value Fee when the offer is accepted.

ABSTRACT: Founded in September 1995 by Pierre Omidyar - a man intelligent enough to write a software program for his high school library at the tender age of 14 - eBay quickly went from a great place to buy sports memorabilia, beanie babies, toys and doilies, to being all things to all people. Weekend warriors and diehard Net merchants alike hawk their wares over what is easily the most popular site on the Internet. It is the place where supply and demand go to play, the ultimate tribute to capitalism. Offerings of interest to graphics arts professionals can also be found on eBay, some of which are discussed.

ABSTRACT: In the coming years, the killer application for online auctions will be in the business-to-business sector, when any manufacturer will be able to clear excess inventory by holding a live, private Internet auction with a handful of distributors - without dumping products at a low price. A business-to-business auction setting is, by nature, a controlled environment - one in which buyers and sellers can screen each other to ensure the quality of goods, timely payments, and, if desired, anonymity between participants.

ABSTRACT:

UK Internet start-up Humpty Dumpty has launched a Web auction service and has acquired eSwap, one of the major e-auction sites in the UK, from owner Graham Watson for an undisclosed sum. Humpty Dumpty intends to make humpty.co.uk the major Internet auction site in the UK. As users of the eSwap Web site are redirected to the new site, the firm hopes that most of the registered eSwap users (more than 8,500) will transfer to the new Web site. Simon Kirkpatrick, CEO of Humpty Dumpty, says the current value of the global Internet auction market is valued at UKPd8.5 bil ($13.8 bil), with a forecast that will increase to an amazing UKPd80 bil ($128 bil) in the next three years. Humpty Dumpty will focus entirely on the UK. Article contains more details about the company and the service.

(OpenSite Technologies Inc claims 50% market share and 200 customers for auction software for Internet auctions; FreeMarkets OnLine was a pioneer online auction service)

ABSTRACT:

Several vendors already offer prepackaged auction software for companies that want to put goods up for bid over the Internet. OpenSite Technologies Inc. is probably the largest of these, claiming 50% market share and 200 customers. OpenSite's return on investment speaks for itself: 80% of OpenSite customers have recouped their initial investment in the first year, 70% in the first three months. While nearly all of OpenSite's customers represent business-to-consumer early adopters, the company expects the business-to-business market will soon begin to take off. So far, only early adopters have entered the business-to-business online auction space. FreeMarkets OnLine, one of the first business-to-business online auction services, links buyers and sellers of industrial goods. FreeMarkets offers a Web-based procurement service for buyers of goods. It provides a real-time Internet bidding engine that engages a handful of suppliers in a "reverse" auction: Suppliers anonymously bid down the price of an order. Giga Information Group forecasts that the market for Internet-based procurement software and systems such as FreeMarkets OnLine will increase by more than 1,000% over the next two years. Another online business-to-business auction, the FastParts Trading Exchange, anonymously links buyers and sellers dealing in electronic components. Users negotiate prices for specific items in real time through the site. FastParts prequalifies sellers and manages the physical transfer of goods auctioned through its site.

Packaged Apps Give Auctioneers Rich New Options

(Forrester Research projects online auctions will handle volume of $52.6 bil by 2002, compared with $2.9 bil annually today)

InternetWeek, p 14

May 25, 1998

DOCUMENT TYPE: Journal ISSN: 0746-8121 (United States)

LANGUAGE: English RECORD TYPE: Fulltext

WORD COUNT: 595

ABSTRACT:

OpenSite Technologies Inc and Moai Technologies Inc claim database integration, central administration modules and scale now make their software systems attractive to even the largest of enterprises. Analysts said auction software vendors could loom large in continued development of Internet auctions as a business-to-business trading tool. Forrester Research projects online auctions will handle a volume of $52.6 bil by 2002, compared with $2.9 bil annually today. Yet 94% of auction systems in use today are custom apps, the research firm said. OpenSite will release version 3.0 of its namesake software, specifically geared toward large enterprises. OpenSite previously used a proprietary database to manage auctions, products and inventory, but the new version will support Oracle and other database applications. For its part, Moai has long supported an array of ODBC-compliant databases, according to Anne Perlman, Moai's president and CEO. The company claims its LiveExchange 2.0 software, which made its debut earlier this year, can handle 250% more transactions per minute than earlier versions without additional hardware. OpenSite enables bidders to place multiple bids for multiple items from a single page. LiveExchange features a Java client for real-time updates of bid prices. Both OpenSite and LiveExchange have beefed up E-mail notification systems. OpenSite added missives that tell a bidder whether they've been outbid or topped a reserve price for automated sale. Web installation features in both systems also allow administrators to distribute creation and maintenance of auctions to corporate managers devoid of computer skills. OpenSite has largely been used by Internet start-ups, but that's beginning to change. OpenSite will add a well-known corporate retail brand, Sharper Image, to its base of 80 customers this week. However, there are impediments to widespread adoption of corporate auction systems. For starters, trading groups typically require the ability to authenticate bidders and track whether a bid has been tampered with en route-technologies that are just coming live today via digital certificates. Moreover, auction systems often imply introduction of new business processes, as many large corporate enterprises are more accustomed to working off of price lists and prenegotiated contracts than selling products to the highest bidder.

The knick-knack freebies given out by pharmaceutical companies to doctors are worth money on Internet auction sites, such as eBay.com. Pens with Viagra and Prozac logos can fetch $A1 to $A2 each, and Zestril post-it note holders, Humalog mirror magnets and Nasonex coffee mugs are selling for $A10 to $A15 each. Some of the highest prices at online auction sites are for items associated with drugs that are no longer on the market. The withdrawal of Lipobay has seen a related desk clock posting a $A30 reserve price tag. The Australian Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association's CEO, Alan Evans, says there is little chance of a black market in freebie items as every doctor is given only an item each.

THE Government's second attempt to sell wireless internet licences has failed to get a single bid after a month because telecoms companies are unwilling to pay the asking prices.

Last November, the Radiocommunications Agency attempted to sell licences for the 28GHz radio spectrum, which can be used to offer wireless internet services, but the auction collapsed in ignominy having sold just 16 of the 42 available at prices far below expectations. Telecoms companies complained it was too complex, reserve prices too high and rollout requirements too onerous.

Czech sites attract browsers but struggle with sales A secondhand, dark green Volkswagen Passat with CD player and radio in good condition for a minimum 50,000 Kc ($1,400), a cream for those afflicted with smelly feet - as used by a Russian submarine crew - and a washing machine for 2,000 Kc are just some of the offers on Czech Internet auction sites. However, a closer look reveals a picture of shop-window interest but few sales. The Volkswagen, for example, had been "visited" by 37 would-be buyers, but none had submitted a bid above the reserve price a few days into the sale. Czech Internet auctions, which now number around half a dozen, have a long way to go to emulate the legendary trans-Atlantic success of eBay, the first U.S. site that has hooked housewives and turned its creator into a dollar multimillionaire. "There is some degree of apprehension at the moment, but I think this is on the wane," said Thomas LaRocca, Internet projects manager with the Brno-based Computer Press AS. The company, with a payroll of just over 100, launched an auction site last October, www.aukce.cz, and so far has notched up sales totaling just over 4 million Kc. The auction site has been tagged onto Computer Press' existing Internet offers, which include travel guides, a hotel reservation service, cultural exchange and information technology news. Cars, electronic equipment, computer hardware and software, books, records, CDs and cassettes are the most popular items for sale. While U.S. sites such as eBay are the model, LaRocca admits the company has still not made up its mind how to get there and generate a few crowns in the Czech Republic. "Right now, the site is free of charge. We will work out within the next six months whether there should be a fee or whether we should go for advertising," he explained. Ladislav Zajicek, the Prague journalist and computer enthusiast behind the Czech Republic's first Internet auction site, www.bajt.cz/aukce, tells a similar story of a money-spinning concept that has still to be realized. "You will probably have to wait four or five years for this to really catch on in the Czech Republic," the 52-year-old Zajicek said. One bonus from this situation is that bargains can be had: "If an item was being sold on Main Street for 10,000 Kc, it would have to be pitched at, say, 2,000 Kc to get some interest and might eventually sell for 5,000-6,000 Kc at the most," Zajicek said. Low levels of Internet penetration, little use of credit cards, and e-commerce security issues are some of the biggest factors putting a brake on local growth. "I do this for a hobby at the moment. I do not make any money out of the site," Zajicek added. Like Computer Press' site, there is no charge for buyers or sellers, with each side left to sort out payment details with the other. "Really there are no legal rules," Zajicek explained. "I do not want people to sell guns, drugs or porn. For the rest, it is a matter between the buyer and the seller. I refuse reserve prices - I don't like them," he added. Computer Press operates a black list of individuals that infringe its code of conduct by, for example, selling items that don't exist or taking higher offers after the auction hammer should have sounded. So far few people have made it onto the list and suffered the penalty of being banned from further trade.

Flowers Direct, based at Skelton near Saltburn, started up just two years ago and registered its name for a GBP75 fee. It is now the country's largest independent online florist which its managers believe is partly due to the easily memorable brand name reflected in its internet presence (www.flowersdirect.co.uk).

Or perhaps stuffed squirrels are your thing? A woman in Pennsylvania has one going spare for Dollars 41; the squirrel is holding a nut in its paws and is, the seller confides, 'very nice'. And look! here's a Teenage Mutant

Ninja Turtle cereal bowl and mug set, dating from 1990, offers from Dollars 3.99. ('The only thing I can see wrong with the set is a ring around the inside of the bowl, like somebody used it in the microwave,' notes its current owner, who lives in Michigan.) But if none of these takes your fancy, don't worry: at the time of writing there are 2,735,003 other items like this offered here, up for the taking by the highest bidder.

To the untrained eye, this stuff looks like junk: rejects from car-boot sales, trinkets thrift shops have turned their noses up at the attic-cluttering detritus of hundreds of thousands of lives spent making chronically misjudged purchasing decisions. But this is eBay, the world's biggest internet-based auction house, and here there's no such word as junk. Around 250,000 new auctions get underway at eBay every day, and anyone can put anything up for sale in more than 1,500 subcategories of headspinning specificity, from Collectibles-Bottles-Fruit Jars (683 auctions) to Miscellaneous-Household-Pet Supplies-Reptile (112 auctions). English Abstract

An auction system (200) in a networked environment. The system includes a preregistration module (201) for identifying and verifying a user of the auction system. The preregistration module checks the credit history of the user and generates a registration record of the user. The system includes an assurance module (210) for conducting a presale inspection of the merchandise item and to generate a merchandise inspection report. The system also includes a description module (215) for displaying the merchandise inspection report and a description report of the merchandise item. The system includes a bidding module (220) for processing a plurality of bids from a plurality of users. The bidding module analyzes each of the plurality of bids from each of the plurality of users to determine whether an incoming bid is higher or lower than a current high bid and to determine a current high bid. The system further includes a notification module (250) coupled to a system database for assigning each of the plurality of bids with each of the plurality of users and that notifies each of the plurality of users whether their bid is successful.

French Abstract

Cette invention concerne un systeme de vente aux encheres (200) dans un environnement en reseau. Ce systeme comporte un module de pre-enregistrement (201) assurant l'identification et le controle d'un utilisateur qui souhaite participer au systeme d'encheres. Ce module permet de controler L'historique de solvabilite de l'utilisateur et genere un fichier d'enregistrement en consequence. Il renferme lui-meme un module d'assurance qualite (210) permettant d'inspecter la marchandise prealablement a la vente et d'établir un rapport d'inspection correspondant. Le systeme comprend egalement un module descriptif (215) permettant d'afficher le rapport d'inspection de la marchandise et un rapport de description de cette derniere. Il comporte en outre un module d'offre (220) servant a traiter une pluralite d'offres emanant d'une pluralite d'utilisateurs. Ce module analyse chacune des diverses offres emanant des divers utilisateurs afin de determiner si une nouvelle offre est superieure ou inferieure a une offre elevee actuelle et pour actualiser l'offre elevee actuelle. Enfin, le systeme comprend un module de notification (250) couple a un systeme de base de donnees qui fait correspondre chacune de la pluralite d'offres avec chacun de la pluralite des utilisateurs et informe chacun de ces utilisateurs si leur offre l'a emporté.

English Abstract

Networked interactive toys (100) have real time conversations with users using speech recognition. Toys (100) are connected to at least one interactive toy server which is connected to entertainment, education, sales promotion providers by internet communication systems. The connection may utilize telephone lines, cellular communication systems, coaxial cable, satellite, DSL or other broadband systems. Toys (100) may be connected by a wireless link to a computing device which provides internet connectivity. Content is provided to enable a user to form a relationship with the toy and is personalized for the user and their environment including location and time of use. The merge of Interactive Television techniques will enhance the content.

French Abstract

L'invention concerne un systeme de jouets interactifs en reseau. Les jouets interactifs tiennent des conversations en temps reel avec des utilisateurs, en utilisant de preference la reconnaissance vocale. Ils sont, de preference, connectes a au moins un serveur de jouet interactif, lui-même connecté, de preference, a des fournisseurs de loisirs, d'enseignement, de promotion des ventes et d'autres contenus, eventuellement via des systemes de communication par Internet. Une telle connexion peut utiliser, par exemple, des lignes telephoniques, des systemes de communication cellulaire, des cables coaxiaux, un satellite, une ligne d'abonne numerique ou d'autres systemes a large bande. Les jouets interactifs peuvent etre connectes, via une liaison hertzienne, a un dispositif de calcul, tel qu'un ordinateur personnel, un decodeur interactif de television ou a une unite de base qui met en oeuvre une connexion par Internet pour le jouet. Les jouets interactifs peuvent supporter des communications par satellite ou par mobile cellulaire. Ces jouets permettent a un utilisateur d'obtenir des contenus de loisir, d'enseignement, de promotion des ventes et d'autres contenus. Le contenu est fourni aux utilisateurs pour leurs jouets ce qui permet aux jouets de creer des relations avec les utilisateurs. En outre, les jouets interactifs utilisent des bases de connaissance utilisateur afin de correspondre a l'historique, aux comportements et aux habitudes de l'utilisateur concernant les loisirs, l'enseignement et la promotion des ventes. Le contenu est ainsi personnalisé a un utilisateur individuel ainsi qu'a son environnement, y compris son domicile et le moment auquel le jouet est utilisé. L'intégration de contenus, tel que ceux de loisir, d'enseignement et de promotion des ventes est améliorée par la fusion de techniques de télévision interactive avec des jouets interactifs.

English Abstract

A sales method and related apparatus for operation through a communications network. The method includes presenting items for sales at a first sales interface (H1) at a first network address (A1) and presenting them for sales at a second sales interface (H2) at a second network address (A2). Offers are received for at least some of the items from offerors' through the first sales interface, and offers are received for at least some of the items from offers through the second sales interface. Some of the items are offered to offerors' having placed offers through the first sales interface, and some are awarded to offerors having placed offers through the second sales interface.

French Abstract

L'invention porte sur une methode de vente et les appareils associes operant par l'intermediaire d'un reseau de telecommunications. La methode consiste a presenter des articles pour la vente a une premiere interface de vente a une premiere adresse de reseau, et a les presenter pour la vente a une deuxieme interface de vente a une deuxieme adresse de reseau. Des offres sont recues d'offrants pour au moins certains des articles par l'intermediaire de la premiere interface de vente et des offres sont recues d'offrants pour au moins certains des articles par l'intermediaire de la deuxieme interface de vente. Certains des articles sont attribues a des offrants ayant donne leurs ordres par l'intermediaire de la premiere interface de vente et certains le sont a des offrants les ayant donne par l'intermediaire de la deuxieme interface de vente.

French Abstract

Cette invention concerne une technique informatique, via Internet, d'achat et de vente de biens et services entre de multiples parties sans rapport entre elles dans le cadre d'un systeme de vente aux encheres. Grace a cette technique, une maison de ventes aux encheres peut vendre des biens et des services a des encherisseurs qui se sont qualifies comme tels tout en ayant la possibilite de garder la haute main sur l'admission des personnes qui surencherissent. Cette technique peut s'utiliser de facon anonyme, sans que la maison de vente aux encheres et les surencherisseurs se connaissent. Cette technique peut egalement etre assortie de fonctions de recherche pour l'identification de biens au moyen de descripteurs alternatifs, de detection des erreurs dans les offres, de surveillance portant sur des multiples evenements de vente aux encheres, d'analyse des offres permettant de determiner la valeur reelle des offres et d'analyse de tendances destinees a anticiper les besoins de biens et de services.

L'invention porte sur des systemes et des procedes permettant de creer et maintenir en fonction un serveur de ventes aux encheres destine a recevoir des demandes d'affichage d'articles a mettre aux encheres. Les valeurs des offres sont affichees et recues dans des unites specifiques a un programme donne dans lequel l'utilisateur est un participant. Les valeurs des offres peuvent etre affichees et recues dans differentes unites en fonction du programme donne. Les participants a differents programmes peuvent ainsi faire des offres sur les memes articles au moyen de differents types de supports ou de differentes monnaies. Le systeme convertit automatiquement les differents types de supports afin de determiner les encherisseurs les plus offrants et les sommes des offres.

English Abstract

A computer based system is disclosed which enables a buyer and a seller to be efficiently matched. The system can comprise a web based foreign exchange platform in which parties and counterparties post their requirements. A computer identifies and matches reciprocal, offsetting positions and effects a trade at a price which is the mid-point of the Interbank bid/offer spread. The system is fast, efficient and fair, as well as being significantly cheaper than conventional foreign exchange systems.

French Abstract

On decrit un systeme informatise qui permet a un acheteur et a un vendeur d'etre efficacement mis en correspondance. Le systeme peut comprendre une plateforme d'echange de devises accessible sur Internet dans laquelle les parties et les contreparties enregistrent leurs demandes. Un ordinateur identifie et rapproche les positions compensatrices reciproques et realise une operation a un prix qui se situe au point median de l'ecart entre le cours acheteur et le cours vendeur interbancaire. Ce systeme est rapide, efficace et juste, il est en outre significativement plus economique que les systemes classiques d'echange de devises.

English Abstract

An auction system including a server system (2) for sending current price messages (30) and for receiving bid messages (32), where the messages are transmitted using single IP packets, and in particular are transmitted using the User Data Protocol (UDP). This significantly improves latency associated with delivery of auction data. The system may be a Dutch auction system which sets a current price for a predetermined interval, and determines all bids received during the interval as being at that price. The current price is increased when the bids are not accepted. The system also has an interface which includes a clock device for displaying the current price based on received current price messages and displaying other data based on received bid reply messages.

French Abstract

L'invention concerne un systeme de vente aux encheres comprenant un systeme de serveur (2) permettant d'envoyer des messages de prix courant(30) et de recevoir des messages d'offre (32). Ces messages sont transmis au moyen de paquets IP uniques, notamment au moyen du protocole de donnees de l'utilisateur (UDP). Ce systeme permet d'améliorer sensiblement le temps d'attente associe a la transmission de donnees de vente aux encheres. Ce systeme peut etre un systeme de vente au cadran qui etablit un prix courant pendant une duree predeterminee et determine que toutes les offres recues pendant ladite duree valent ledit prix. Lorsque les offres sont refusees, le prix courant augmente. Ce systeme est également pourvu d'une interface comportant un dispositif d'horloge permettant d'afficher le prix courant sur la base de messages recus de reponse aux offres.
